

HICCOUGHS TEN MONTHS, DIES DESPITE DOCTORS

Family Tries to Keep Secret Court-land Brooks's Death From Unusual Malady.

Endeavor of the publicity that attended the efforts of physicians to stop the hiccoughing of Courtland Brooks of Greenport, L. I., when he was afflicted ten months ago, caused his relatives to keep secret the fact that the ailment caused his death. He was buried Wednesday, his thirty-first birthday.

In the early stages of Mr. Brooks's malady, greenport physicians tried in vain to halt the convulsions, then called in specialists, whose efforts were also unavailing. The patient was taken to the Brooklyn Hospital last Thanksgiving Day and placed in a plaster cast, but he continued hiccoughing, even when asleep.

The surgeons decided that he had tuberculosis of the spine and the diseased bones were pressing on certain nerves. The case was pronounced unique in medical history. Mr. Brooks remained in the hospital three months and returned home unimproved. He hiccoughed constantly until weakness caused his death.

RESCUES DROWNING WIFE IN SEAPLANE, SAVES TWO OTHERS

Kendrick Swims Ashore With Exhausted Friends and Returns in Air Boat.

SEARCHES THE WAVES.

Light at Last Reveals Mrs. Kendrick Still Afloat and She Is Taken In.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 10.—Using his seaplane, Beryl Kendrick saved his wife from drowning last night after he had towed Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Barnes of New York ashore by swimming.

It was the first rescue by a flying machine on this section of the coast. Kendrick, who is well-to-do, has a hangar on the beach near his home at Gramercy Place. About 11 o'clock last night he went with his wife and the New Yorkers for a plunge in the surf. After letting a few breakers hit them they decided to swim out.

At times a mill-race current runs through a sea pass recently cut out by storms. The four bathers had gone only a short distance when they were gripped by this underflow and were swept a quarter mile from shore.

Mrs. Barnes, excited, threw her arms about her husband's neck. In trying to loosen her grip he became exhausted and could make no headway against the current. Mrs. Kendrick, a good swimmer, had remained quietly beside her husband, who was formerly champion swimmer of South Jersey.

"Get them ashore, for I'm all right," said Mrs. Kendrick. Making sure she would be able to keep afloat, Kendrick gave Mr. and Mrs. Barnes a grip on his belt on either side and started for the beach. Twenty minutes later he landed them two blocks from their starting point.

Running to his hangar, Kendrick, with the aid of a life guard, Johnson, launched his hydro-aeroplane and turned on the searchlight. After flying out to the point where he had started in with Barnes, he descended to the water and cruised at slow speed.

They found no trace of Mrs. Kendrick for fifteen minutes. Then a voice piped up.

"My! Boys, but I'm glad to see you! It was getting a bit lonely out here."

Mrs. Kendrick, tired, was still making a plucky fight to keep afloat. She was taken aboard and a quick run made to the beach without going off the water.

The entire inlet cottage colony seemed to have turned out to cheer when a landing was made. The other couple had recovered sufficiently to join the reception. Mrs. Kendrick soon regained her strength and walked to her cottage.

EXPLAINS GIRL'S DEATH.

Slater Says Machine Skidded When Miss Quinn Was Killed.

BORTON, Sept. 10.—Seeking to prevent the revocation of his automobile license, William H. Slater of Milton, a son of Mrs. Horatio N. Slater, a multi-millionaire of Webster, appeared before the Highway Commission here and explained the accident to his car at Marlboro Aug. 12, which caused the death of Miss Evelyn Quinn of Jamaica Plain.

He was accompanied by his counsel, Major Thomas L. Walsh, a brother of the Governor.

Slater said that he and Raymond Murphy went riding early in the evening, and while driving through Jamaica Plain Parkway met Miss Quinn and another young woman. The girls were taken into the machine and the party drove out through Marlboro. On the return, while the car was running at thirty-four miles an hour, a curve appeared suddenly and he attempted to reduce the speed but found that the brakes would not work. The machine skidded and struck a pole, the impact throwing Miss Quinn from the tonneau.

BROTHER SWEARS VENGEANCE BESIDE SLAIN MAN'S BODY

Police Seek Relative Who Gave Vendetta Sign After Hester Street Shooting.

At Mulberry and Hester Streets last evening a man ran up behind Matteo Leone, thirty-six, of No. 115 Mulberry Street, and shot him three times in the back.

Leone walked into the middle of the street and fell, but arose and dusted his clothing and then, with apparent ease, walked to the opposite curb and sat down.

The man who had shot him fled. Leone got up again when several men crowded around him and he was taken into the bank of Luigi Spaventa & Co., at No. 121 Hester Street. There he revived. The crowd without the bank became so large that the police reserves were called out.

A man who was said to be a brother of the wounded Leone forced his way through the police lines and into the bank, and when he got to the side of the dying man, knelt there and thrust a forefinger into his mouth and bit it after the fashion of Italians who swear vengeance.

Then he put his ear close to the lips of the dying man, who whispered something to him which the police have not yet been able to ascertain. The brother left the bank before the police had a chance to detain him. They were looking for him to-day with an address in Brooklyn to aid them.

Leone died in the hospital within half an hour. In his pocket was found a letter signed "Mary," and it also bore the picture of a bleeding heart, and in this letter the woman accused Leone of being "untrue."

Detectives Botti and Hayes said that since the new law went into effect Sept. 1, which made it a misdemeanor merely instead of a felony to carry a deadly weapon, unless it could be shown that the weapon was being carried with felonious intent, shootings had largely increased.

FROM CONVICT'S STRIPES TO MINISTER'S FROCK

Murderer, Freed After Being Educated in Prison, Enters Theological Seminary.

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Sept. 10.—George Jones, who was serving a life sentence in the State Penitentiary for murder, walked forth a free man to-day, paroled by Gov. Hatfield. At once he left for Kentucky, where he will enter a college and prepare himself for the ministry. Anxious that his past should be forgotten, he refused to name the college, but it is in the southern part of the Blue Grass State.

The release of Jones was secured through the intercession of Miss Emma Davis, sister of United States Senator John W. Davis, who has been engaged in prison relief work for years. When Jones was received in the penitentiary he was an illiterate boy of twenty who could neither read nor write. Today he is a well educated man of forty. He killed Gordon Belcher, a neighbor and playmate, in an argument about money. He has been a model prisoner.

WILSON TO GREET G. A. R.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 10.—President Wilson has accepted the invitation of the Grand Army of the Republic to lay the cornerstone of the new amphitheatre in Arlington National Cemetery, across the Potomac River from Washington, during Encampment Week.

The ceremony will take place on Thursday, Sept. 30, the day following the grand review of the veterans.

On the opening day of the Grand Army encampment, President Wilson will deliver a message of greeting and good will to the veterans visiting the national capital.

Limbless Wonder Dies.

Pneumonia caused the death early yesterday of William T. Goy, fifty-five years old, known in showboats for years as the Limbless and Armless Wonder. He leaves a widow. Burial will be in Greenwood Cemetery to-day, the body being taken from the undertaking shop of John H. Kowski, West Eighth Street, Coney Island.

WHY HE SAID GOOD-BY.

Private Doherty was six foot four in his socks; the sergeant was a foot shorter. The sergeant looked along the line.

"Head up there, Doherty," he cried. Doherty nodded his head.

"Up higher," said the little sergeant. "There, that's better. Don't let me see your head down again."

"Am I to be always like this?" asked Doherty, staring away above the little sergeant's head.

"You are."

"Then I'll say goodby to ye, sergeant, for I'll never see ye again."

MOST MILITANT 'ANTI' IN FISTIC PROPAGANDA PUNCHES SUFFRAGISTS

Six in a Row Feel Her Prowess—Believes in a Whipping Every Day.

Every woman needs a good beating once a week except suffragists; they need one every day. That is Mrs. Anna Lynch's opinion.

Who is Mrs. Anna Lynch? Well, she may tell the Magistrate in the Jefferson Market Court to-day, but she wouldn't tell the police of the West Thirtieth Street Station last night. All she said was she was Mrs. Anna Lynch, forty-five. Then she stopped.

Mrs. Lynch is one of the few militant anti-suffragists in existence. About 100 persons were listening to a suffragist orator in front of the Metropolitan last night, when a deep female voice from the rim asked:

"What are your children doing at home now? Playing in the street and becoming criminals while you're down here talking? Is your husband earning the dollar? I'll wager there are holes in his socks and roaches in your kitchen."

"If you had any brains you wouldn't want to vote. You don't know how lucky you are to have a man bringing in the money. If you vote you'll have to go to work with the men."

The crowd quickly grew to 1,000. A policeman was working his way in, so Mrs. Lynch started down Broadway. For two blocks she stopped every woman she met, and asked if she favored woman suffrage. If the woman said "Yes" she felt the force of Mrs. Lynch's fist.

"You'll change your mind or I'll hammer it out of you," was her slogan, but she didn't give them time to change their minds. She had attacked half a dozen women on their way to theatre with male escorts before the police took her.

When the militant anti was arraigned in court the Magistrate, by his verdict, gave an intimation of the sentiments of the Court toward votes for women; he found her guilty and sent her to the Workhouse for three months.
